The New Environment: Is it really new?
Incorporated Society of Musicians (UK) Study

• “The success of our music industry is being undermined by a high level of discriminatory behaviours and practices, including sexual harassment, inappropriate behaviour and discrimination.”
• 60% of musicians report having been harassed at some point in their career.

• 77% of those who experienced harassment did not report it.

• 46% said this was because they had ‘fear of losing work’.

• Just 5% said they did not report the issue because the issue resolved itself.
Hypothetical Story of Albert, Betty, and Connie and the Anonymous Symphony Orchestra
ALBERT is a senior violinist with the ASO.

- He’s an ebullient, physical person, prone to hugging, touching.
- Socializes with colleagues.
- Paternalistic attitude to stand-partners, providing mentoring and “helpful” comments, that some find intrusive.
BETTY is an unmarried woman in her 30s and is Albert’s current stand-partner.

- She recently complained to ASO’s Exec Dir about inappropriate conduct by Albert.
  - Constantly touching her, places hands on her shoulders when review a score, sometimes “massaging” her shoulders.
- Suggestive comments: “If I was younger, I’d be all over you.” Comments on her dress and looks.
- She has responded with light, but negative remarks indicating that she is not interested, but Albert hasn’t backed off.
- She is hesitant to say something that will get back to Albert, because they work together.
Connie: another ASO musician who recently complained to the E.D. about Albert.

They had a personal relationship starting at ASO. When their personal relationship ended, their work relationship soured.

Albert makes critical, snide comments about Connie’s playing.

Connie states that on ASO tour, Albert came to her room late at night, intoxicated, and demanded to be let in. He left only after she called for help. The police were not called.

Albert vehemently denies this happened.
CONFLICTING ACCOUNTS & LOYALTIES

• Some players come to Albert’s defense, saying his physical conduct happens with both men and women, was harmless and not sexual in nature.

• They also say that Betty has a professional grudge against Albert, because he did not support her audition for advancement.

• Others support Betty’s and Connie’s stories, and say it’s high time Albert is dealt with, and forcefully.

NEITHER “SIDE” IS BACKING OFF their stories, and the conflict is a major disruption.
